for a year or more, telling you that you ought to know all about the company that carries your fire insurance, but have you done anything about it? Many have, but the majority of policy-holders have done nothing about the selection of a company. They are still "fiddling."

In the history of fire insurance in America, a large majority of the fire insurance companies organized have failed or retired from business. To be insured in companies like Weil's, that have been in business a hundred years and will be in business a hundred years from now, costs no more than to be insured in one that may go out of business next week.

LITTLE CHANGE IN CONDITIONS

CONFIDENCE STIMULATED BY FARM SITUATION.

Money Situation Is Not Yet Entirely Cleared Up It Seems.

SUMMARY BY HENRY CLEWS.

New York, Nov. 7. (Special).—As a rule the closing of a political campaign has a favorable influence upon values, because uncertainty is removed, and final results are often partially discounted in advance. This probably explains the present strength of the market. The campaign was accompanied by a good deal of acrimony, much of which should disappear after election day. The country is tired of agitation and is entitled to a period of rest at least until the reassembling of congress a month hence.

Speculative opinion on the stock exchange has been somewhat divided. Prices reacted from the sharp October rise, which was due to very powerful leadership; and now there is a disposition to carefully weigh the influences which are swaying prices in an upward direction. Much of the popular dislike of corporations and railroads which existed in the first half of 1919 is disappearing, and the conviction is growing that attacks upon property rights will not succeed and that indiscriminate raids upon corporations are productive of more harm than good. It is observed also that corporation managers are more conciliatory in their attitude, and are showing a strong regard for public welfare, as well as a more general disposition to obey the law. Such a policy as this if sustained will do much towards disarming public criticism. There is no longer the fear that once existed of a radical decision by the supreme court on the oil and tobacco cases. It will be remembered that an adverse decision in the famous Northern Securities case did not have an injurious effect upon the market; and there is no reason for anticipating any calamity as a result of the supreme court decisions when they arrive. The position of the railroads in regard to transportation rates is also more satisfactory. In the first place, many of the railroads are showing large gains in gross earnings, notwithstanding the talk of business depression, and could expenses only be brought within reasonable limits, there should be no fear as to net results. Even in the latter respect the railroads are maintaining their position better than anticipated, and there is no immediate prospect of any reduction in dividends. The railroads, however, are much in need of new capital, and this they are unable to procure under present financial conditions. In view of necessary large expenditures by the railroads it is not improbable that the Interstate commerce commission may allow some advances in rates, which would enable them to finance urgent requirements and to maintain fair dividends. The situation of the railroads as regards investment conditions is well illustrated by the fact that in October the total security issues reported was only $56,000,000, the smallest in any month since September, 1906, and $50,000,000 less than in the same month a year ago. Since January 1 the total security issues reported have been $1,299,000,000, against $1,323,000,000 a year ago. Of this amount railroads have issued $785,000,000, as against $724,000,000 a year ago, an increase of $61,000,000. It is worthy of notice, however, that this increase was entirely due to a large issue of notes, which for the nine months amounted to nearly $195,000,000, as against $50,000,000 for the nine months of 1909. In bonds and stocks combined there was a decrease for the year of $83,000,000, while the issue of notes increased more than $144,000,000. This illustrates very clearly the difficulties in the money and investment markets.

Money.
The monetary situation is not yet entirely clear. The crisis so confidently predicted in the early part of the year, especially by London, has not materialized; nevertheless, the immediate course is not without its pitfalls. An unwelcome feature is the continued excess of loans over deposits, indicating that the banks are lending upon their capital and surplus. This weakness may disappear in due time, but it is a condition which requires watching, being a symptom of overexpansion of credit. Western bankers are less confident of escaping a money squeeze than three or four weeks ago, and it is quite possible that they may be obliged to call upon New York more freely for their balances. Stiff rates for money may be expected for the balance of the year. The government has also been withdrawing funds quite freely, the result being that we may expect a continuance of low bank reserves at least until funds begin to return from the interior. The only real cure is a further reduction in loans; and the higher rates for money recently prevailing suggests a tendency in that direction.

There is, however, no reason for serious concern regarding the money market, the probability being that moderate liquidation and a steady contraction of loans for a few weeks would probably rectify the situation. Conditions abroad are not unfavorable to this center and there has been considerable placing of American finance bills abroad by borrowers of the highest standing. For some time past there has been a growing tendency among the banks to loan upon non-liquid collateral, and this is a practice that should be promptly discouraged.

Confidence.

In the general business situation there is little change. Confidence has received considerable stimulus from the fact that the farmers are having another good year, but in nearly all departments of industry there is a spirit of hesitation which still keeps the volume of business below a year ago. The question of cost continues to be the great problem in all lines of business, not only among consumers, but equally with producers and distributors. Many staple articles of commerce have shown a declining tendency which is hopeful, and suggests that the country is on the way to readjustment. Declining prices do not usually stimulate business until it is felt a settled level has been reached. As soon as this is realized we may look for more activity in trade. There is already a better feeling in the iron trade as a result of the readjustment accomplished there. Cotton goods also have been moving more freely for similar reasons. Commodities prices are showing a declining tendency which should be encouraged, as that is the surest way of restoring equilibrium and reducing the cost of living, which is the basis of much present unrest and depression. Our foreign trade is showing better conditions as a result of lower prices for staple commodities. Curative processes are steadily at work, and if nothing occurs to cause a fresh impairment of confidence some improvement in business conditions should develop at no very distant date.

The technical position of the stock market is strong. Securities are concentrated in strong hands, and unfavorable conditions appear to have been fully discounted. In some respects the situation is favorable to bullish manipulation, and while the general outlook is not in all respects as satisfactory as could be desired, it would cause no surprise if the efforts on the part of the big interests for a further advance were continued now that political agitation for the present election has run its course. Nevertheless, the market situation is one that requires caution in speculative transactions. It remains to be seen what the attitude of other powerful interests will be to those now leading the market.

No Hope for Him.
At a recent trial in Scotland an elderly spinster was called to the witness box to be examined. "What is your age, madam?" inquired the counsel. "Sir," answered the witness, "I am an unmarried woman and dinna thing it right to answer that question."

The judge interposed and told her she should answer. "Oh, weel, then," she said reluctantly, "I am fifty."

"Not more than fifty?" questioned the counsel sternly. "Weel, dinna ash yersel," she replied, "I am sixty."

The inquisitive lawyer still further asked if she had any hopes of getting married, to which Miss Jane replied: "Weel, sir, I winna tell a lie. I hinna lost hope yet," scornfully adding, "but I widna marry you, for I'm sick and tired o' your palaver already."—Tit-Bits.

Hold-Up of a Party of Them Yields Bandits Small Amount.
El Paso, Texas, Nov. 7.—Entering the private car of Walter Douglas, general manager of the Phelps-Dodge interests in the southwest, two bandits held up a party of eastern directors and officials of the Calumet and Arizona mine at Lordsburg, N. M., last night, getting $11,200 out of the crowd, which contained several millionaires. The twenty cents was obtained from the negro porters. The victims in the wild west hold-up scene, which was staged on a siding, were: C. D. Autremont, James Briggs, Captain James Houston and J. C. Greenway, general manager of the Calumet and Arizona mine, all of New York.

Millionaires Have Only $11.
A well-known German, who is something of a wag, walked into one of the public offices in Cincinnati the other day and from the noise it was plain that he was wearing a pair of new shoes, or ones that had recently been repaired. One of the clerks remarked about the shoes, and the German said: "It comes pretty near selling these shoes the other day."

"How is that?" asked the clerk. "I had 'em half soled," said the German, as he walked out of the office. A deep groan was heard as he slipped through the door.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.
